Our ancestors did not live in a vacuum. They lived, worked, socialized, and married in the midst of a larger group of people. Those people included not just family members but friends, neighbors, employers and fellow employees, fellow churchgoers, and business associates. Researching this larger group of people often leads to greater success in genealogy, as opposed to just researching our target person or couple of interest. Let Robyn show you how to get started using this valuable strategy.

This is a combined lecture and workshop! After the approx. 1 hour lecture, there will be a 15-minute break, then we will return for another hour of Workshop. Every registrant gets to submit their cluster research problems or questions (in advance), and Robyn will select several to work through during the workshop. There will also be a Q&A.
